

ALLOW SCHEDULE INTERRUPTION TO SERVE / MINISTER IN GOD'S TIMING

The fall time of the year is so pretty with all of the colors and cooler weather; my favorite time of year. While out on a bike ride I might see an occasional cotton field and it reminds me of the scripture every time I see one (Jesus speaking): “Do you not say, ‘There are yet four months, and then comes the harvest’? Behold, I say to you, lift up your eyes and look on the fields, that they are white for harvest” (John 4:34-36). I’m getting better about looking for those appointments where the Spirit puts me in touch with someone I need to reach out to. As a part of this, I need to work on doing so in His timing and not mine because I get so much in a hurry doing my own thing that I may miss that opportunity, or do a shabby job fulfilling it. Marina knows me well. She knows that as a project manager my days are often filled with task-oriented assignments that either I have taken on or those I impose on my team. If I’m about the Kingdom and looking on those fields that are already “white for harvest,” then I know that my schedule must be interruptible to serve Him effectively. I’m getting better but have a ways to go. Guess that’s what the scripture reads about “... growing from glory to glory” and being a work in progress.
